

AMERICA'S FUTURE DEMANDS THAT WE SLASH LEGAL IMMIGRATION TODAY!

As Americans debate our current immigration crisis and focus on how to stop the flow of illegal aliens into our country, it's critical that we also reduce the number of legal immigrants the U.S. absorbs annually.

Immigration will soon stand as the major driving force behind increased population growth. If we fail to reduce the number of legal immigrants permitted into our country annually, the Census Bureau projects that immigration will account for three-fourths of our future growth.

The fact is that just over 1.1 million new legal permanent immigrants were admitted into the United States in 2018 - adding to an increasing immigration stream that has been going on for decades. Our current population of 332 million has grown by more than 50 million people since 2000 - and if current trends continue we will become a nation of 400 million by 2058.

That's too many people!
Such huge numbers will trigger scores of economic, environmental and social problems.

A child born in America today will likely live into the 22nd Century. It falls to all of us to leave them a livable nation. NPG is proud to lead the fight for sensible and responsible immigration policies and a sustainable population future. Our countless thousands of supporters work toward these important goals via our research, educational programs, national ads, and member activism on both the federal and state levels.
