

With so much media attention on the Presidential election, the candidates are talking about many of America's everyday issues.

We're hearing some serious debate about family planning, the environment, national security, jobs, immigration...

But there's one issue no one is talking about,
and it's actually the common link between them all...

...U.S. population size and growth.

No problem facing our country can possibly be made better by adding more people to it.

It's time to talk about what really matters.

Visit www.NPG.org to learn how you can help.